Invitation Letter

Cities have evolved hand in hand with human history, and today, they stand at a critical crossroads.

We live in an era of unprecedented transformation: relentless technological innovation, shifting global landscapes, and climate forces reshaping communities worldwide.

Home to half of the world's population, cities now stand on a journey to redefine their future amidst uncertainty more unpredictable than ever before. Yet this uncertainty is not an obstacle — it is a catalyst for new growth and cooperation.

As Korea's leading public institution for housing policy and infrastructure development, the Korea Land and Housing Corporation [LH] drives housing stability and balanced growth through new towns, industrial complexes, and housing welfare initiatives — building sustainable cities for the future.

To expand the foundation for international cooperation, LH has hosted the Global Business Convention [GBC] since 2020.

Now in its seventh year, Global Business Convention 2026 will be held under the theme "Future Cities in an Age of Uncertainty." Together, we will explore how a changing world is shaping urban infrastructure, and discover new strategies for global cooperation.

The special session, Global Urban Connect, draws on LH's extensive global network to bring together government officials from emerging economies and leading urban development companies. We hope this will be a valuable opportunity to forge new partnerships and build lasting cooperation.

This uncertainty need not hold us back — it can inspire us to imagine what comes next.

We hope this convention will be a meaningful gathering to share visions for the future of our cities and shape sustainable growth together.

We warmly invite your interest and participation.

Thank you.
